Though she had wished to be with her mother on Sunday, which is now the case because of Parakh's hectic schedules, she is not letting her spirits down. 'Last time when I was in Delhi, I had left behind some chocolates and a perfume, which happen to be my mother's favorite, to be delivered to her on Mother's day' informs Parakh.

No just this; on Sunday starting at 12 PM in the night, Parakh will be getting bouquets delivered to her mother. The first would be at mid-night, the second when she reaches office, the third when she is back home and lastly again at mid-night before the day ends.

She also recalls the day when she had first celebrated Mother's day. She never knew what and when Mother's day was until she was about to leave school. 'When I was in standard eighth or ninth, I came to know about Mother's day and bought a card and wrote on it and gave it to my mother' recalls Parakh.

Her mother could not understand as to why Parakh as giving her a card on that day. It was then that Parakh informed her about Mother's day and she realized the same.

Ever since then, Parakh has been celebrating the day with her mother.
