

Naam.com offers FREE Whois Privacy Protect service with each domain name registration.

Offers whois privacy protect service to clients at no extra charge. Clients can now shield their personal details in the whois database.

Bangalore, Karnataka, March 3, 2007 /India PRwire/ -- Naam.com has announced the launch of its new, FREE Privacy Protect domain name privacy program for customers. While other companies charge for this service, Naam.com offers domain name privacy protection free to all of its customers.

Privacy Protect service protects Naam.com customers from having their personal contact information displayed on the Internet for anyone to access. Every time someone purchases a domain name, their name, address and phone number are entered into a public database that can be viewed and used by anyone. This exposes their personal information to spammers, telemarketers and other undesired third parties. With Privacy Protect, that information is kept private and requests to view this information will be sent directly to the domain name owner who can choose whether or not to respond.

Many people are concerned about having such private information 'out there' for anyone to access. Naam.com is happy to provide the Privacy Protect Service FREE for clients to shield their personal details in the whois database.
